

Anderson's Wear-Easy Shoe.....

is a shoe made especially for farm use and that will wear "as easy as an old shoe" right from the start. A shoe in which there is not a peg or nail or thread to touch the bottom of the foot. A shoe that is almost as soft and flexible as a lady's hand turned. A shoe with a pure white oak innersole that is cooling to the bottom of the foot; all other every day shoes are made with cheap acid tanned red leather innersoles that burn, scald and blister the feet so badly in hot weather. A shoe that will give more comfort for general farm use than any shoe that has ever been gotten up.

We keep this shoe in Buckle and Congress & the price is $1.50

GOEBEL WINS.

Gets 32 Majority Over Hardin In The Windup.

Strong Ticket Named, Nearly All Of Them Young Men—
Beckham For Lieut.
Governor.

Louisville, Ky., June 29.—At 10:45 o'clock Tuesday night the closest and most exciting contest for a gubernatorial nomination in Kentucky was ended in the victory of the Goebel men. Up to the very finish of the final ballot the result was in apparent uncertainty and the friends of Hardin were waging a vigorous contest. Not until the 16 votes of Union county were cast for Goebel did the Hardin men surrender hope and come to the conviction that Goebel had out-managed them.

It was a tremendous victory for the brilliant young Kenton county leader, and coming at the end of a struggle wholly unprecedented, it fairly set the friends of Goebel wild with delight.

A Great Ovation.

Such an ovation as he received after the final vote has not often been seen in any convention, and a feature of it, which was especially gratifying to his friends, was that the managers of the opposing candidates, who, for seven days, had fought to gain some advantage against his quiet wit, wonderful powers of organization and masterly generalship, were among the first to grasp his hand and promise him fealty. And when Joe Beckburn led him to the front of the stage, the Dean of the Kentucky Democracy standing side by side with the brawnier of its young leaders, there was a wild storm of cheering, which lasted until lung power was exhausted. The day in the convention was full of excitement and apparent uncertainty, but never once was Goebel himself apprehensive as to the result.

Knew His Power.

He held the key to the situation and knew it. The Stone and Hardin men knew it as well, and they made the effort to save their men by a unique plan. Both candidates were brought upon the stage to speak in support of a resolution adjourning the convention and declaring for the election of a new set of delegates. That was the serious and perhaps fatal mistake.

The movement to adjourn the convention furnished exactly the opening Goebel needed. It went against the humor of the delegates who for five days, with a Sunday intervening, had fought and paid board bills for their favorites.

First Aggressive Move.

Then came the first aggressive step of Goebel. His people offered a resolution to drop the lowest man. It was carried by the same sentiment that condemned the movement to adjourn and it gave strength to the man who was fighting to face the issue. Then came the enforced retirement of Stone, the gallant old soldier from Lyon county, and a single-handed contest between Goebel and Hardin. Through all the exciting moments of the final vote Goebel was still confident, with the consummate skill and fearless aggressiveness which made him a national leader of the party in Frankfort; he had laid his plans, and knew that they could not fail. The fight he made challenged the admiration of his bitterest opponents, and his hard-won victory made doubly sincere the congratulations of his friends.

The Final Ballot.

The official result of the final (twentieth-sixth) ballot was as follows:

BICYCLING IN GREECE.

A Visit to Classic Scenes and Cities a-Wheel.

The notion which foreigners have of the roads of Greece, that they are had compared with those of other countries, is an error. A bicycle journey through Italy and Sicily, disabused me of that notion. The worst road that I ever tried was that between Caserta and Naples, and the next worse was that leading to Rome from the north. There are, of course, some bad roads in Greece; but even Sicily, to say nothing of worse roads in Italy, cured me of complaining against Greece. For a pure pleasure ride, the road between Tripolitza and Sparta would be hard to match anywhere in the world. It is in capital condition, and, on account of its gentle grade, involves very little walking. Six hours suffice for the journey in either direction, and the view either way is superb. The ride through Aetolia and Acaeania, regions considered half civilized in the classical period of Greek history, but always fine in natural beauty, with big lakes and rivers that "move in majesty" (a rare thing in Greece), hedged in by high mountains, is perhaps the best in Greece. One rides from the shore of the Corinthian gulf, opposite Patras, to Arta (Ambracia), in two days, with a comfortable night at Agrinion, passing the historic Missolonghi and visiting the ruins of Calydon, Pleuron (Eniadae, Stratos, Lammaea, and Amphioleian Argos; while to the right and left are other ruins which invite one to make detours if one is not in a hurry. And one ought not to omit the recently excavated Thermen, the ancient capital of Aetolia, even if it does cost an extra day. The long-known and impressive ruins of Omada, the chief city in Acaeania, also invite one to linger a whole day instead of spending a few hours in passing.

The first five cities of ancient Greece in renown and interest were Athens, Sparta, Argos, Thebes and Corinth. One can ride from Athens to Thebes or Corinth and back in a single day; he can also easily reach Argos from Athens in a day, and this leaves a rather long day for one for reaching Sparta. Any good bicyclist would find it no great matter to leave Thebes and pay his respect to Athens on the first day, visit Corinth and Argos on the next day, and sleep comfortably at Sparta the next night. — Paris Daily Messenger.

COLDS IN WARM CLIMATES.

Suggestion as to How to Prevent Taking Them.

Colds and allied diseases are so easily induced in a hot climate, which keeps the pores of the skin constantly open, that few people escape being afflicted for many weeks at a time by some form of these distressing attacks; and, once having contracted cold in the head, sore throat or inflamed lungs, it is difficult to assuage the trouble. The hot, moist air in sunshine, changing to a subtle chilliness under a heavy shower, or to positive darkness during the clear nights, constantly adds to the inflammation of the membranes unless the utmost caution is exercised. A susceptible person or a victim to colds must take prompt measures to alleviate the simple trouble, or it may be followed by pneumonia, or it may be followed by influenza, or by the far worse and more invidious disease, consumption. Woolen abdominal bandages are advocated as a means of reducing the danger of rapid changes in the surface temperature of the body, and are undoubtedly worthy of consideration. The writer, however, prefers to dress with a fair degree of warmth, generally wearing thin cotton underclothes, protected by light woolen overclothes. While in this way one may become overheated, the cooling-off process is not nearly so dangerous with a complete covering of nonconducting woolen materials as it is with the thin cotton and linen clothes affected by the native population. It is a good plan always to put on heavier clothes at night. If you feel the slightest chilliness, exercise, or put on a light overcoat. By following these suggestions the grave afflictions of local congestion may be largely prevented. — Harper's Weekly.

EDUCATION AND CRIME.

Army of Crime Draws Mainly from the Unlettered.

It is satisfactory to observe that figures lend no support to the pessimistic conclusion which we sometimes see maintained that education does not diminish crime, and even tends to increase some forms of it. The recruits of the army of crime seem to be drawn mainly from the uneducated. Of 148,902 convicted prisoners, only 3,324 were returned as able to read and write well, and only 72 as of superior education. On the other hand, 30,371 could neither read nor write, and 113,037 could only read, or could read and write imperfectly. Evidently there is no need to give up our faith in education as an agency for diminishing crime.

Nothing is plainer from statistics than the fact that the ranks of the habitual criminals are being abundantly recruited by young men. This class is not the product of past causes, merely continuing in the present as a survival of conditions no longer existing. It is still being produced freely. An extremely large proportion of the burglaries, house-breakings and the like are the work of offenders under 21. No less than 34 per cent. of the persons convicted for these offenses in 1897 were between 16 and 21. It is clear, therefore, that young men take to professional crime very readily, in spite of all deterrent influences. This question was fully dealt with in the introduction to the 1893 statistics. A table was there given showing the proportion of criminals at each age to the general population of the same age. This proportion was found to be highest between 16 and 21, next highest between 12 and 16 and to fall off steadily as life advances. The proportion seems somewhat lower for 1897, but is still very high. This great prevalence of juvenile crime is a very discouraging feature. It is evident that powerful and active forces of social corruption must be at work in the country to produce so many youthful criminals.

An unwholesome phenomenon is a distinct increase in burglary and house-breaking. The annual average of convictions has risen from 1,465 in 1883-7 to 1,684 in 1893-7, and there has been a much greater increase in the number of crimes of this class reported to the police. As these crimes are precisely those which are usually committed by the professional offender, the increase is serious enough on any showing. The fact that the number of professional burglars is evidently not diminishing, and the further fact that the number of burglaries, etc., reported to the police more and more outstrips the number of trials and convictions for those offenses are both highly disquieting. — London Law Magazine.

FIREPROOF MORTAR.

A Composition of Serpentine Rock Withstands Fire and Water.

Many mixtures have been tried by builders and architects with a view of producing mortars which will really possess fire-resisting properties, and nothing satisfactory up to the present has been discovered, but now some one has discovered that serpentine rock, which contains a large amount of asbestos, possesses very high fire-resisting properties. This rock when powdered and mixed with good lime, etc., can be heated up to 1,100 degrees Fahrenheit without experiencing any damage whatever. One of the great dangers that a building is on fire is that the mortar after being heated cracks or disintegrates when water from the firemen's hose is thrown upon it. The new material, however, it is claimed, can be heated to 1,100 degrees Fahrenheit and immediately plunged into water without cracking. Another great advantage possessed by this new material is its high degree of elasticity. The advantage of this will be readily appreciated by architects and others who are constantly called upon to advise with regard to sinking or settling buildings. As soon as a building begins to settle ordinary mortar begins to crack, but this new mortar is so elastic that it does not crack, but simply yields to the strain. But perhaps one of the most remarkable properties of all is the ease with which nails can be hammered into joints made with the new mortar without damaging it in the slightest degree. It flows readily from the trowel and can be easily pointed up; it will also receive decorations of various kinds, and can be painted either with oil or water colors. — Cecil (Md.) Democrat.

THE NEW YORK WORLD.

THIRICE-A-WEEK EDITION.

PRACTICALLY A DAILY AT THE PRICE OF A WEEKLY.

The striking and important events of the last year have established the overwhelming value of The Times & World to every reader. For an almost annual sum it has kept its subscribers informed of the progress of all our wars and, moreover, has reported them as promptly and fully as if it were a daily. With our interests still extending throughout the world, with our troops operating in the Philippines, and the great Presidential campaign, too, at hand, its value is further increased.

The motto of the TRICE-A-WEEK WORLD is improvement. It strives each year to be better than it was the year before, and the public confidence in it is shown by the fact that it now circulates more than twice as many papers every week as any other newspaper, not a daily, published in America.

When you go to Arkansas or Texas you can travel in comfort if you know how. Ask the ticket agent for a ticket via the COTTON BELT ROUTE and you can ride in a reclining chair car, without extra cost, and thus avoid the discomforts you would encounter in an ordinary car. The chairs are arranged so you can have a comfortable seat during the day and a good place to sleep at night. Each car is supplied with a ladies' dressing room and a gentlemen's smoker. You will not have to bother about changing cars, for these cars run through from Memphis and Cairo to Texas without change. Direct connections are made at Cotton Belt junctions with trains for all parts of Texas, Indian Territory, Oklahoma and the far West.

If you are thinking of taking a trip, write and tell us where you are going and when you will leave, and we will tell you how much your ticket will cost, what train to take so as to make the best time and connections, and anything else we can that will help make your trip a comfortable one. An interesting little booklet, "A TRIP TO TEXAS," will be mailed free to any address.

NEW RAILROAD.

To be Built From Dixon to a Point on the I. C. Between Sturgis and Blackford.

Dixon, June 20.—Irving H. Wheatcroft, on the Southern Construction Co., and C. A. Doris and R. L. Jackson, chairman and secretary of the citizens' committee on the part of the people this morning signed an article of agreement between the said Construction Co. and the people of Dixon, Lisman and Clay, providing for the construction of a line of railway from this place, by way of Lisman and Clay, to a point on the I. C. R. R. The line is to intersect the I. C. R. R. further north than Sturgis and not further south than Blackford. The company bind themselves to begin the construction within ninety days from the date of the contract and to complete it within six months thereafter. The citizens along the line have subscribed for thirty thousand dollars of first mortgage 20-year gold bonds bearing interest of 6 per cent, payable semi-annually, and have given the right-of-way.

This line runs through the best grain and tobacco portion of Webster county and through one of the best coal fields in Kentucky. It means much for the development of the natural resources of the county and furnishes a splendid opportunity for the investment of foreign capital.—Madisonville Mail.

Weekly Crop Bulletin.

The United States Weather and Crop Bureau gives the following summary of weather and crop condition in Kentucky for the week ending June 20, 1899:

The first part of the week was warm with frequent showers, but the latter part cool and dry. The rains were rather unevenly distributed—some sections receiving but little, while in other localities farm work was delayed considerably by rain.

In most counties early wheat was being harvested during the latter part of the week and good progress was made. The yield of wheat will be very light in many localities—less than was expected—but the quality is good. Oats are doing fairly well, but are quite backward yet. Corn is generally doing very well; some early fields already laid by.

Tobacco setting was generally completed during the early part of the week, and where not injured by the grasshoppers, is doing very well. The injury from grasshoppers has become very serious in some localities, some fields having been abandoned entirely on this account.

Gardens are doing very well and vegetables of excellent quality are coming into the markets. Irish and sweet potatoes are doing very well. Early Irish potatoes are ready for the table in some localities and of excellent quality. Fruit is not very satisfactory. There was a good crop of strawberries, but they are now about over; and other fruits are rather scarce. Apples and pears are falling badly. Meadows and pastures are doing very well.

Something handsome and up to date is the catalog of the Lexington Horse Show. Fair Carnival. The program is mapped out therein, assures the public of an entertainment and exhibition upon a larger and grander scale than any show ever attempted in the South. The enterprise is a mammoth one, the management most liberal in all premiums and purses, and the amusements features vastly superior to any ever seen here. E. W. Shanklin, Secretary, Lexington, will mail catalog to all interested parties upon application, or you can get one by calling at this office.

Don't abuse the men, abuse nature. It was intended that men should be the jays that they are. There are not many people smart enough to tell the difference between a hoodoo and a mascot.

AS FIRST LIEUT.

Capt. Feland's Appointment in The U. S. Marine Corps.

A Washington dispatch announces the appointment of Capt. Logan Feland, a Hopkinsville boy, whose application for a position in the Marine Corps was first rejected because of alleged heart trouble. The dispatch says:

"The Surgeon General has waived the report of the board which found Logan Feland, of Hopkinsville, physically disqualified for a lieutenancy in the marine corps."

"Mr. Feland passed one of the best mental examinations this year. Of the candidates who took the examination with him last week he attained the highest average, 98.75 per cent. Mr. Feland, ranking first on the list, will skip the grade of Second Lieutenant and be appointed First Lieutenant, one vacancy now existing in that grade."

READING IN BED.

Not Bad if Neither Too Heavy Nor Too Stimulating.

Reading in bed used to be objected to in the old days on the score of danger, and one of the first injunctions of a hostess to her guest was in reference to that prevalent but disquieting practice. But in these days, when electric light has removed the risk of fire, the question is one solely of its benefit or harm to the prospective sleeper. The Medical Press and Circular is of the opinion that a short course of some standard author may act as a composing sedative, but books which contain extremes of wit, melodrama, comedy, tragedy or philosophy should be avoided. Like a good supper, the reading should be neither too heavy nor too stimulating. On the other hand, most physicians are of the opinion that bed should be kept as much as possible for sleep. A habit of reading before putting out the light and closing one's eyes is apt to grow and become a tyranny, and, like drugs, the more you indulge in it the longer has the reading to be to have the desired effect. It must be admitted, however, that the habit, to all but those fortunate beings who are asleep the moment their heads touch the pillow, is very seductive, and that a good many people's most serious reading is done at that time.—London Telegraph.

I was seriously afflicted with a cough for several years, and just failed to cure myself until I tried before. I have used many remedies without receiving much relief, and being recommended to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, by a friend, who, knowing me to be a poor devil, gave it to me. I tried it and with the most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved me very much and the second bottle has absolutely cured me. I have not had a good health for twenty years. I give this certificate without solicitation, simply in appreciation of the gratitude felt for the cure effected.—Respectfully, Mrs. Mary A. Dean, Caremore, Ark. For sale by R. C. Those who do not like Goebel can vote for the platform. It is the best party platform ever adopted in Kentucky.

The tin horn politicians who figured in the Louisville Convention will hear more about their horns in the future.

The Courier-Journal and Times have announced their intention to support the Democratic ticket this year. The Dispatch shows signs of bolting, but it may feel better after its meal of crow.

Logan Peland finally passed the physical examination and was appointed first lieutenant in the marine service at a salary of $1900 a year and $40 a month when on shore for quarters. His friends here are proud of his success.

Goebel's nomination was brought about in a great measure by the mistakes of his opponents. The first mistake was the position taken by Chairman Johnston after Redwine had been elected Chairman by 570 votes. He reopened contest cases, invited others and held "magistrate's court" on the "stage" for seven hours, finally scaling Redwine's majority of 27 votes down to 3 1/2 votes. But for the determined attitude of the party leaders, the counting out of Redwine would have been completed. As it was, the Chairman changed his tactics at the last moment and announced the figures electing the Goebel-Stone chairman. After assisting Goebel to organize the convention, Capt. Stone became suspicious of Goebel and formed an alliance with Hardin, a step resented by many of his most ardent supporters. Prior to his, however, came the Hardin indignation meeting at Beck's Hall, over the delay of the credentials committee, which worked day and night for 48 hours. This foolish step made many votes for Goebel. Then came the disorder in the convention, culminating in a disgraceful attempt of the Hardin men Monday to break up the convention with tin horns, toy whistles, etc. The Hardin and Stone leaders, now operating together, joined in this tumult, every hour of which added to Goebel's following. Finally the greatest mistake of all was committed by the "new combine," when both Capt. Stone and Gen. Hardin appeared in person and advocated the sine die adjournment of the convention. This blunder proved fatal. All of the candidates for minor offices united with Goebel's forces in voting it down and followed this up at once by adopting a dropping rule. Goebel had 423 votes in his disposal and he easily secured 140 more by combinations with other candidates, who were glad to get on the winning side. Goebel's forces were managed throughout with a master hand. Only one mistake was made and that prevented his nomination on the first ballot. The Louisville vote was not divided with Stone on the first ballot as had been promised, but was all cast for Goebel. The Louisville delegates thought a stampede had come and acted upon the impulse of the moment. This angered Stone's friends, who tried to nominate Hardin then and there but failed. Goebel's friends quickly threw Davis county to Stone to offset the Louisville defection. Although the Louisville vote was divided on every subsequent ballot, Capt. Stone became distrustful and wound up by making a combination with Hardin that lasted until the end came.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. Prices Realized By Adelbert Yearlings Out East.

Twelve Head Brought Close to Twenty-Four Thousand Dollars.

Telegrams from Sheephead Bay tell the story of the remarkable sale of a lot of thoroughbreds taken East by Dr. M. W. Williams, of this city, last week, and disposed of at auction Monday. Twelve head of yearlings by Imp. Albert were sold for $23,750, an average of $1,970. These are figures that break the prices for the year, but this is no surprise to judges of horseflesh who had visited the Adelbert stud just before the departure of these yearlings.

The best prices realized were: B. f. by Albert—Leda Bromley & Co., $2,700.

The Ticket Completed.

With the star attraction off the boards, the convention did not draw so well Wednesday morning. Everybody seemed anxious to get through with business, and this was shown by the unanimous adoption of a resolution providing that after the second ballot for minor offices the hindmost candidate be dropped, and that nominating speeches be limited to two minutes. Nominating speeches were then begun.

For Lieutenant Governor, J. C. W. Beckham, of Nelson; Wm. P. Thorne, of Henry; Maj. Thomas H. Hays, of Louisville; Judge Edward Kelly and J. M. Kendall were placed in nomination.

The first ballot resulted: Beckham, 364; Thorne, 268; Kelly, 226; Hays, 201; Kendall, 30.

The dropping resolution was amended so as to take effect after the first ballot for each minor office, instead of the second. Maj. Hays withdrew, and a second ballot for Lieutenant Governor was taken. Beckham had a slight advantage when the roll call was finished, and changes to him of the votes of several counties soon gave him enough votes for a nomination. Then Kelly and Thorne in turn withdrew, and the nomination was made unanimous.

For Attorney General, Judge Robert J. Breckinridge, of Boyle; Judge James A. Scott, of Franklin; John S. Smith and N. B. Hays were presented. The first ballot resulted as follows: Breckinridge, 302; Scott, 267; Hays, 307; Smith 214.

On the second ballot Smith was dropped. Breckinridge received 401, Scott 361 and Hays 338. Under the rule this left Breckinridge and Scott to be voted for on the third and final ballot. It took over an hour to complete it because of numerous changes after the first roll call. A recapitulation showed Breckinridge to have been nominated by the votes of 580 to 502.

The race for Auditor was a warm one, this being the most desirable office from a pecuniary point of view at the disposal of the convention. Gus Coulter, John B. Chenaunt, R. C. Collier and John Gayle were the aspirants. A ballot was taken, but it showed such an advantage for Coulter that Chenaunt was withdrawn and the nomination of Coulter was made unanimous.

Those presented for State Treasurer were Gus W. Richardson, of Meade; John C. Herndon, of Jefferson; Judge S. W. Hager, of Boyd; R. C. Ford, of Bell, and Jesse T. Gosnell, of Grayson.

The first ballot resulted: Hager 366, Gosnell 342, Ford 222, Richardson 158. Richardson was dropped on the next ballot, which resulted in the nomination of Hager by a vote of 584 to 505 for Gosnell, Ford withdrawing before the ballot was completed.

C. Breckinridge of Clay County, was nominated for Secretary of State on the first ballot, his opponents, John W. Headley, of Louisville; Thomas Cockran, of Bullitt, and Green Keller, of Carlisle County, withdrawing before the vote was announced.

The delegates were confronted by a new issue in the contest for Superintendent of Public Instruction in the person of Miss Mary Sasseen. They were too tired to be gallant, however, and her sponsors had some difficulty in getting a hearing. She received a small vote. Harry V. McChesney, of Livingston county, was nominated on the first ballot, M. A. Cassidy, of Lexington, being his only other opponent.

I. B. Nall, of Louisville, was nominated for Commissioner of Agriculture on the first ballot, receiving 564 votes against 527 for Dr. J. M. Frazee.

The convention then adjourned sine die.

FREAK EGGS.

Kentucky Fowls Appear to Have Engaged in a Freak Producing Contest.

A few days since the Gleaner told of an egg (a hen's egg) brought to the office by Mr. Ed Oberdorfer, remarkable in the fact that it had no yolk. Since that time Kentucky exchanges have racked their brain in the effort to out-Herod Herod or in brief, to find something even more remarkable than the Oberdorfer egg. The following are two of the samples:

Mrs. Webster Porter, using some eggs for cooking purposes, found a perfect yolk and white, that also contained a small egg with perfect shell which was somewhat larger than a quail's egg, says the Clinton Democrat. On breaking the smaller egg it also was found to contain a perfect yolk and white.

Assessor J. H. Taylor, living near Lewisport, comes to the front with a freak egg, says the Hancock Clarion. One of his black Minorca hens a few days ago dropped an egg about which nothing unusual could be detected. On breaking it for domestic purposes it was found to be a perfect egg in every way with another perfectly developed egg on the inside or center. The shell to the inner egg was soft.—Henderson Gleaner.

SEASON OF 1899.

To OUR FRIENDS: Another season of seed time is fast approaching, and the wise and prudent farmer will again use the old and favorably known JONES' BRANDS OF BONE AND ANIMAL MATTER FERTILIZERS, that have for many years done their full duty when applied to both Spring and Fall crops. The use of commercial Fertilizers is almost universal, and the experience of many years has proven conclusively that ANIMAL MATTER FERTILIZERS are the most complete plant food known, and the fact of putting ACID PHOSPHATE ROCK in a bag and branding it "DIS-SOLVED BONE" does not make it animal matter. Honest strictly pure Animal Matter Fertilizers cost more than rock goods because they are extensively used, and we ask that you remember this fact. Our goods go out under our guarantee analysis, and this guarantee is good. We offer our goods on their merits, and refer with great satisfaction, to their most excellent reputation in all parts of Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky, where they are extensively used. We respectfully urge you to give the celebrated Jones' Brand Utilizing Co's goods a trial on both Spring and Fall crops, and we know satisfactory results and future orders will certainly follow.

Bill's Number One

By Robert Halfax.

"Bill!" "Yus!" Bill jumped almost guiltily. He had gulped down his supper, stored away the unsold vegetables, washed down as far as the ring round his neck, sneaked into the bedroom, and was lost in round-eyed contemplation of the five-week-old pink stain in there, when that queer sort of whisper came through the doorway.

"Bill!" She edged in farther. "Don't yer love me? Ain't you got the loveliest boy ever a man longed for? Or are you going to think more o' the child than me now?"

"You'll wake him! What'd yer mean, gal?" gasped Bill, taking the cutty from his mouth.

"What do I mean? Ah! you don't want no words about it. There's the boy—is he to go all his life with a number, like a convict? I don't think! I s'pose you do know he's got to be named and registered before another week—or didn't you?"

"Lumme," said Bill, staring. "So he has. Blowed if I hadn't!"

"Bill, you know you'd forget your head, you would. But that don't matter; there's the child, and you know now." She folded her arms, and looked up at the crack in the ceiling. "Ain't we don't want no words, we've been so nice together; but I s'pose I may speak in my own house. I only ask what's the dear little's name to be?"

"His name, you'll mean one thing or t'other for him through life."

"Him? Why, Bill, of course—Bill Simmons," said he—or rather, faltered it. "Didn't I s'pose that long ago—well, we needn't change the name on the barrows."

"Oh! you did? Well, then, there never ain't no telling, is there?" and Mrs. Simmons uttered a little hysterical, as she fumbled behind the picture of Garibaldi. "There, I think it's his mother's place to settle that. So when you go to the registrar, you take this bit o' paper, and see he puts it down properly. Here it is—and no words; er—Ermytruda Marmaduke."

"Ermytruda?" Bill swayed up, his eyes goggling. "That boy?"

"That boy. Why shouldn't he have a duke's name as well as anyone? You didn't care; I did. Me and Mrs. Pippleton found that name in a paper, and we ain't going back on it."

"You—give it here!" said Bill, huskily, making a snatch. "Bilmy, it's a plant! You've left it till now so as Mrs. Pippleton? Who's she? I'll break her blooming neck, I will!"

"That's it! Send the baby into a fist, along of your beastly temper. I knew how it would be. As sure as you stand there, Bill, that's the child's name, and so there."

"Ermytruda Marmaduke," he spelled out, incredulously. "What a kid that's going to sell carrots on the kerb along o' me! Oh, yes! ain't he springing up in the world. One pen-north o' turnip-tops, Mister Ermytruda Marmaduke, and no stalk! Yus! I'll see about that. Bill he was born, and Bill he sticks."

"So you say! Allow me to tell you, Mr. Simmons, that child's not going in the carrot line, nor any other; he's going in the civil service, or not at all, where they go up and take their money and walk out again; either that or a beerhouse, so now! And as for Mrs. Pippleton, the best friend the child's got, if you go down those stairs and make words between them, he—he shan't have no name at all! And I'll let him know every day as his own blessed father sat down and conspired to ruin him. Now!"

She swung out. Bill stood staring at the paper—a morsel torn from "The Bandit of Blue Gulch." Ermytruda Marmaduke—he swayed even now at the very thought of being called the nipper's name. Ermytruda—Stewed eels and gin! It was past bearing. He caught up his cap and went down the stairs—quickly enough to catch Mrs. Pippleton edging off. She had been listening, then. He clenched his fist as she snorted and clattered her firebricks.

"Yus; for two brass pins I'd down yer," he said, in a whisper.

"I know you would; but there's only one in the house, as it happens. Hark who'll do the downing! P'raps you'll get off my ol'clott."

Bill strode down the street, his neck red and puffed, to the pub at the corner; Pippleton was calling for a pen-north of shag when he felt his ear pained.

"What ho, Bill! what's yours?"

"Yus, I know all about that; I'll buy my own. Now, what game's this—you and my missus? D'yer see that there?"

"My kid's name. What's that? You bunged into her head between you; but it won't come off—see?"

"Ermytruda—" Pippleton started. "Not me, Bill. Take my oath I ain't heard the notion about it. Lumme! They've been and coo'd it between 'em. Why, it's a gal's name, ain't it?"

"No, yer fool, it's a duke's name; and I'm to go to the registrar's and spit that name out. Me! I s'pose my Pip, he don't want no row, but I've got to have it with your missus or someone before I've done. It's all her; my Harriet can't even read back-ards; you know that. Til—"

"Don't you do nothink o' the silly sort, mate. Wimmen are wimmen—don't forget it. You're that dry—hair set with a lead on. Mind, you're here, Bill; I've got no kids, no I ain't never had no nother; but they've got this idea into their heads. Well and good; you can't do to kick. Go home and say it's the loveliest name you've heard told to no mortal piece. Then, to-morrow dinner time, you and me—"

The rest died in a dramatic whisper, but enough that they nudged each other, and that Bill rubbed his hands, stood drinks all round the bar and went home singing "What's in a name?" says Shakespeare.

Sharp as one o'clock struck that next day, Bill left his stall to itself and ran to meet Pippleton at the corner. Five minutes later they were pausing nervously outside the registrar's office.

"It's all right," Pippleton whispered. "How'll they know? You met the registrar tearing along with a summons for not doing it sooner, and he wouldn't have that Ermytruda at no price—stuck out it was a duke's patent family name; and just at the very last minute you thought of 'Bill.' Who's he? Come on!"

They stood on both hands; they took off their caps, and walked into the presence of the great man, where he sat among his awesome volumes. They nudged and pushed each other forward; and then at last Bill got rid of his lump and began.

"Appy New Year t'yer, sir!" ("I'm sure," echoed Pippleton. "Er—se've just called in to put down the birth of a newborn male child—no sir, miss. Yus.")

"You mean a boy," said the registrar, testily. "We only speak in that fashion when referring to a demise. Any day."

"Date?" Another hudge and stare, and scratching of heads. "Well, there, now, blowed if I—oh, Yus, just o' December—you know, Pip! brought down the rent fourpence last. Yus. Name? Bill Simmons, sir—B—B—I—A. h, of course, William, I should say. I ain't used to this, gov'nor; don't take no notice o' me. Bill Simmons—my name, too; 40 Fountain court, Shore-ditch. "Tater salesman."

"In—deed?" The registrar glared himself, flicked a few pages, and threw down his pen. "Upon my word, I don't know whether you people with your babies think the public records are kept here for a joke! Your child, sir, was registered three hours ago, by its mother under the name of—of—yes, Ermytruda Marmaduke. Simmons—se've apparently of no consequence. Exactly: two women came, if you remember. You see how unnecessarily you waste my time? Too late? My dear man, the child was only born once, I say."

"REGISTRAR OF BIRTHS, DEATHS AND MARRIAGES."

"T'S ALL RIGHT," PIPPLETON WHISPERED. "HOW'D THEY KNOW?"

"suppose? I have provided one certificate of birth, don't tell you!"

Deep into the silence the soft sarcasm sank. Goggle-eyed they stood for a minute. Bill white and Pippleton red. Then their feet started shuffling, and next moment they somehow found themselves gasping outside.

"You—you done this?" choked Bill, swinging his fist. "No lies; I say you done it. Lumme, I'll—"

"I never, Bill! Me? Strike me lucky if I s'waled a word it was in my sleep, when he never d'yer know. The missus says, she says 'Ah, you can't do so can we.' Swop me, Bill, I hadn't opened my blessed mouth that much—Bill, you're never going off that ratty over nothing? Can I help my missus? Ain't I had all my vegetables off you since when? Well, there!"

"What did you marry her for?" asked the holy; but he stopped. "For two pins I'd go and kick a copper an' get run in, I would. To think my nipper—let go!"

"Shan't! He's all right—at as be-fore. Now, choke it down and come on. Why, here, you can chuck you can get your own back over this a knob-art. Ha, ha, we never thought of that! Lumme, Bill, we've got 'em set!"

"Have we? How? More o' your kid?"

"My kid? No, you mug, can't you see? Why, next time—"

A whisper, a wink, and the two went off roaring—St. Paul's.

An Epitaph.

The following is a good epitaph story. An old Yorkshire farmer died. The funeral being over, the widow desired to have a tombstone that should do credit both to the deceased and herself. To the local sculptor she explained her wishes: "I don't want nothing out o' the way, but handsome and simple, like this: 'William Wilson, died Octo-ber 15th, 1899. Aged eighty-five. The good die young.'—Academy."

A union man who is good enough to walk out in a strike is good enough to be put back to work upon settlement.

Bad management keeps more people in poor circumstances than any other cause. To be success in one must look ahead and plan ahead so that when a favorable opportunity presents itself he is ready to take advantage of it. A little forethought will also save much expense at a valuable time. A prudent and careful man will keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house, the slightest fellow will wait until necessary to use it and then ruin his best horse going for a doctor and have a big doctor bill to pay besides; one pays out 25 cents, the other is out a hundred dollars and then wonders why his neighbor is getting richer while he is getting poorer. For sale by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

Morgantown wants water-works and the question is being agitated with prospects of success.

The popular view of the relation of the blood to human character and conduct is marked in many a familiar expression. We speak of there being "bad blood" between people at enmity, of "blue blood" as indicating ancestry, of "black blood" as denoting a cachectic nature, and in many other phrases mark our belief that in the mental, moral and physical man, "the blood is the life." The one basis of a healthful, happy and useful life is pure blood. With the blood pure, disease has no permanent lodging place in the system. For this reason the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery rids the body of disease which have their origin in impurity of the blood. It not only purifies the blood, but ridding of the waste and poisonous matter, increasing the action of the blood making glands, and building up the body by supplying the blood in quantity and quality such as is essential to a condition of health. It cures ninety-eight people out of every hundred who give it a fair trial.

FURIOUS FLAMES.

Caused by a Gasoline Brazier's Burner Blowing Off.

E. M. Rich & Co., E. B. Clark & Co., and D. J. Hooser Sustained Heavy Losses.

The alarm of fire that startled those within sound of the court house bell about four o'clock Wednesday afternoon was caused by the discovery of flames in the rear room of the building at 104 South Main street, occupied by E. M. Rich & Co., dealers in bicycles. The immediate cause of the fire was the blowing off of a burner of a gasoline brazier, which was burning at the time. The floor of the room was at once flooded with burning gasoline, creating immense volumes of both fire and smoke.

A prompt response from the fire department was all that saved that and adjoining buildings. But the flames were only extinguished after great damage had been done.

The building occupied by Rich & Co., and the one adjoining it on the north occupied by E. B. Clark & Co., grocers, on the ground floor, are both owned by D. J. Hooser, whose losses are covered by insurance. Although Rich & Co., saved most of the wheels in their house, their loss in tools, etc., will amount to several hundred dollars. Only a few days ago the firm let their insurance run out.

The loss falls heavily on the grocery firm of E. B. Clark & Co., who have closed their doors to the public pending the adjustment of their loss by the insurance companies. Mr. Clark states that their loss is fully four thousand dollars, as great lots of valuable goods stored in their rear rooms are entirely destroyed by either fire or water. The firm's loss however is fully covered by insurance.

Charles Lewis, a tinner, occupied a portion of Rich & Co's store, but reports little loss.

Every thoughtful owner of stock has a large lump of RETSOFF ROCK SALT in his manger, horse lot and pasture. This enables his stock to get salt all the time without getting too much, which sometimes proves fatal. We have just received a car load of it. It's the only pure salt obtainable. It will last a long time in the weather.

Another Car of Stock Peas

just received. Clover has been so uncertain for several years our farmers are planting peas as a substitute. They are fine for feed and fertilizer.

We have a very full stock of FERTILIZER FOR TOBACCO also, and can supply you right out of our warehouses.
